

SOCI101N : Introduction to Sociology

This course provides the student with an understanding of the development of sociological thought and the theories and methods used to study social structure and interaction. It emphasizes the influence of culture on human behavior and social relationships. Students will learn how people's location in society and its institutions shapes their experiences and life chances, and how individuals and groups can influence the process.

Class Hours 3

Lab Hours 0

Credits 3