

POLS215N : World Affairs

This course explores major issues of the contemporary world political environment from both theoretical and factual perspectives. Some of the topics covered include basic International Relations theory, such as: Realism, Idealism, Game Theory, and Foreign Policy Decision Making theory. It also addresses current international issues, such as: international trade; globalization; economic interdependence; the UN and other international organizations; human rights and international law; terrorism, the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction; the environment and population.

Class Hours 3

Lab Hours 0

Credits 3

Prerequisites

ENGL101N or ENGL110N.